A Message from North Carolina's Secretary of State

Elaine F. Marshall

The book you hold in your hand can move mountains. The actions of government at the state and county levels affect the lives of everyone living in North Carolina. We have a direct, peaceful means of influencing those decisions via the democratic process.

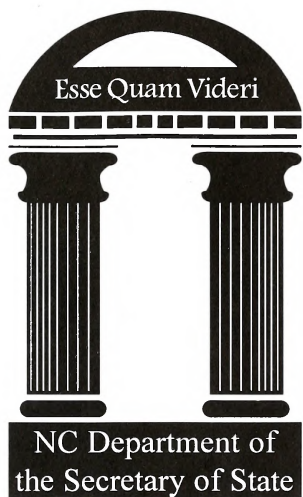

Our collective control of government doesn't stop at the ballot box. We have the right to know what our government is doing. We have, as well, the right to voice our opinions to our elected leaders.

The 1999 Directory of State and County Officials of North Carolina provides you and every other citizen of our state with names, mailing addresses, telephone numbers and e-mail addresses of our state's leaders. You can use this information to exercise your right to know what your state and county governments are doing and to make your wishes known to them. It empowers you to exercise full citizenship as an active, informed member of the body politic.

North Carolina has an enviable reputation as a "good government" state. The emphasis North Carolinians have traditionally placed on active involvement in their communities contributes to that reputation. Positive involvement -- citizenship that improves the community -- is fueled by knowledge. This book seeks to put that knowledge directly into your hands. It will help you to move mountains.

Elaine F. Marshall
N.C. Secretary of State
